

POWDER PAINT

Powder Paint is paint in a fine powder form that flows and cures when heated. Powder paint should only be used on items that can be easily and safely heated such as jig heads. You can heat the item to be painted and dip it in the powder or you can sprinkle the powder paint on a heated item.

Below are instructions provided by the Powder Paint Manufacturer.

INDIVIDUAL DIP METHOD

Pre-heat the jig or lure to a temperature (350° F). Preheating can be done with a small propane torch, gas burner, cigarette lighter, or by pre-heating in a conventional oven. The higher the preheat temperature, the thicker the film of paint will be.

After preheating, immediately dip jig into powder and remove at once, knocking off excess powder by striking the hook on the lip of the container. If you notice powder smoking, preheat temperature is too hot.

Because this paint is extremely hard after curing, you should open the eye now with a sharp object such as a hook point or eye popper. Upon opening the eye you will notice that the paint is very brittle. This is because it has not been cured. Heat conventional oven to 350° F for 15 minutes with jigs hanging on the oven rack. If jigs have a weedguard, cure at 250° F for 20-25 minutes. The paint is now completely cured, giving you an extremely hard and durable finish.

VINYL LURE & JIG PAINT

Vinyl Lure & Jig Paint is an extremely hard, fast drying finish used by many lure manufacturers. It may be applied by dipping, brushing, or spraying. Stir paint well before using. Do not smoke or use around sparks or open flame. Use with adequate ventilation.

Directions: Coat Jig Heads with White Base Coat which does the bonding to the metal. Apply paint to obtain desired finish. White finish may require 2 coats. Most colors only require 1 coat. Each coat will dry to the touch in about 10 minutes and may be recoated. To speed drying, hang jigs in a heated area with temperatures not to exceed 130 degrees. Keep air moving with a fan and exhaust escaping solvent fumes.

Fluorescent colors dry flat. So for that "Quality" look, use Clear Gloss for the final coat. Always use a white Base Coat under Fluorescent Colors.

(White Base Coat and White Paint are the same.)
